From mountainous pumped hydro to cutting-edge cryogenic and compressed air technologies, the UK is deploying a broad portfolio of energy storage solutions to ensure energy security, decarbonisation, and grid resilience.

A new era for renewable power and energy security begins today (Tuesday 8 April) as Ofgem launches a new cap and floor investment support scheme, unlocking billions in funding to build major Long Duration Electricity Storage projects for the first time in 40 years. Long Duration Electricity Storage.

Wind power is often generated in remote areas like the Scottish Highlands, where there is low electricity demand. To transmit this power over long distances to areas of higher demand (mostly in the south of England) requires power lines, but these have transmission limits and there are not enough.

The UK's journey to net zero will be impossible without large-scale energy storage. As renewables like wind and solar become dominant sources of electricity, storing excess power and deploying it when demand is high is critical. From mountainous pumped hydro to cutting-edge cryogenic and compressed.

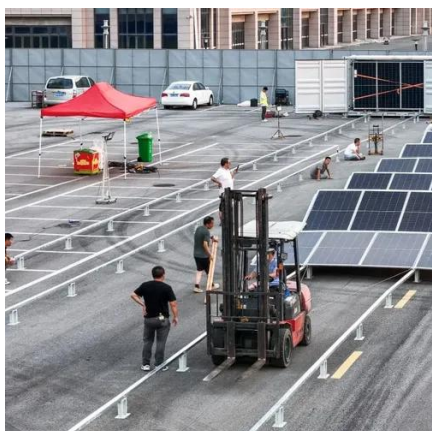

Did you know a typical British home could slash electricity bills by 60% with a home energy storage system?

As Ofgem's price cap keeps playing hopscotch with our wallets in 2025, savvy homeowners are turning their properties into personal power stations. These sleek battery walls do more than just.
