Renewable energy in the Cook Islands is primarily provided by solar energy and biomass. Since 2011 the Cook Islands has embarked on a programme of renewable energy development to improve its energy security and reduce greenhouse gas emissions, [1] with an initial goal of reaching 50% renewable.

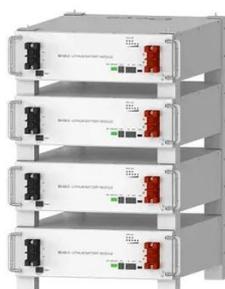

But for the island of Mangaia, the largest island and the one experiencing the most underperformance (68% renewable energy compared to 92% planned), the most significant issue has been integration with the existing diesel generators. These generators experienced frequent faults when operating with.
